About FREE MINDS

Free Minds is based on the assumption that rigorous engagement with the humanities—such as literature, philosophy, art, history, and critical thinking—can change people’s lives.

Hundreds of educationally and economically disadvantaged individuals across the country have experienced unexpected freedom, empowerment, and opportunity by participating in the Clemente Course in the Humanities.

College CREDIT

This course, offered by Free Minds Dallas, may be taken purely for personal growth. But those who satisfactorily complete the two semesters may receive six hours of college credit.

The course is taught by accomplished professors from the region. It is accredited through Bard College, a nationally recognized liberal arts college located in Annandale-on-Hudson, New York. The credit can be easily transferred to most colleges and universities.

Course DETAILS

Classes meet in the evenings twice a week from September to May.

The classroom is at the CitySquare Opportunity Center, 1601 S. Malcolm X Blvd (at I-30).

No cost for tuition or books.

Childcare is provided.

If we learn through the humanities to want to seek freedom, ... if we learn to live a life not of reaction but of reflection, then we're prepared to go on to do wonderful things and have a full life. We're free in ways that other people are not.
